MONTHLY UPDATE

Following a poor September, capital markets experienced a strong October. The US Dow Jones Index posted its best October-month ever. Inflation numbers and thus interest rate hikes by central banks continued to take center stage. Fears that aggressive hikes would lead to a recession were mitigated by strong labor statistics, especially in the US.

Value stocks outperformed growth stocks

As far as Q3 earnings were concerned, outcomes were generally better than expected (or feared). However, reports from the largest tech companies were received poorly and October marked the largest stock outperformance for value ahead of growth for a single month in many years.

Further interest rate hikes

Many central banks, including the Federal Reserve and the ECB, lifted rates as inflation continued to be elevated. The so-called pivot (when rate hikes inflect) still seemed some way off, even though a less aggressive hike than expected by the Canadian central bank was seen by investors as a sign of a more dovish direction. However, most analysts believed a more benevolent stance by central banks would not be seen until fund rates were considerably higher than the current levels.

Eight long months of war

The Russian aggression towards Ukraine went into its eighth month. A Ukrainian counter-offensive was met by terror bombings by Russia, targeting civilians and infrastructure objects leading to significant casualties as well as widespread blackouts. At the very end of October, Russia unilaterally decided not to prolong the UN-designed export of grain from Ukrainian harbors. The US and the EU continued to show resolve in their support for Ukraine.

Re-election at the Chinese party congress

In China, the 20th communist party congress re-elected President Xi for a third term. Furthermore, the central committee was reshuffled in a way which further consolidated Xi's power. Investors reacted negatively to what was seen as a further pull-back from market reforms and the Hang Seng index in Hong Kong fell to multiyear lows.

Continued turmoil in the UK

The turmoil in UK politics continued. Liz Truss will go down in history as the most short-lived PM in history (44 days) and was succeeded by former chancellor Rishi Sunak. Determined not to make the same mistake as his predecessor, Mr Sunak pushed his budget announcement into November. The volatile markets for UK currency and bonds thus calmed down.

Energy worries ahead of the winter season

Energy continued to be in focus ahead of the winter season. The Biden administration made additional drawdowns to the Strategic Petroleum Reserves, all in order to mitigate US consumer pain at the gas pumps ahead of the mid-term elections. In Europe, natural gas supplies were sufficiently restored, even though prices were several times higher than in the US. The decision of OPEC+ to cut production by two million barrels per day was condemned by the US.

The world index thus increased in October. All sectors posted gains, albeit with great dispersion, with energy being by far the best performer, followed by industrials and financials. At the other end, consumer discretionary and utilities lagged the overall market. As far as regions were concerned, all major regions noted gains with one exception; Hong Kong, which saw its benchmark index fall double digit.

FUND PERFORMANCE

In October, the fund increased by 5,5 percent in its main share class IC1 (EUR). All subsectors contributed positively to performance, with the strongest share price gains within services and biotechnology, partly as a result of strong third quarter earnings, but also due to important clinical updates as well as one take-out.

The best contributors of the month were Gilead Sciences and Genmab. The worst contributors were Tenet Health and Revance Therapeutics.

Expected approval for Gilead Sciences' breast cancer treatment

Gilead is one of the larger US biotechnology companies. Revenues are primarily generated within the company's virology segment and, in particular, from a broad HIV franchise. However, during the past few years, Gilead has invested in additional business areas such as cell therapy and oncology.

In October, Trodelvy, its new breast cancer treatment, was granted priority review by the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) with an expected approval early next year. In addition, Gilead reported stronger than expected revenues and earnings for the third quarter. The positive clinical updates, strong financial results and an improved investor sentiment for the biotech sector benefited the company's share price during the period.

Genmab's pipeline progress lifted the stock

Based on its proprietary antibody technology platform, Danish Genmab is one of the largest healthcare companies in the Nordic region. The company has six approved products which are commercialised by Genmab in collaboration with external partners, of which the partnership for Darzalex with Johnson&Johnson is the strongest contributor to revenues and earnings.

Pipeline progress is an important driver of shareholder value. In October, Genmab and partner Abbvie submitted an application for the approval of epcoritamab, a CD3xCD20 bispecific antibody for the treatment of relapsed/refractory large B-cell lymphoma (LBCL) and diffuse large B-cell lymphoma (DLBCL), in the US and in the EU. The share price increased by 18 percent in October.

Tenet Healthcare's earnings report fell short of expectations

US healthcare provider Tenet Healthcare operates hospitals and ambulatory surgery centers throughout the US as well as offering revenue cycle management services.

During the month, Tenet issued an earnings report that fell short of market expectations. Moreover, the company lowered earnings guidance for the full year. Higher than expected use of contract labor in the hospital segment and higher than usual cancellation rates in the surgery center segment were the two key culprits during the quarter. Together, this led to a decline in the share price during the month. In conjunction with the earnings report, the board authorized a $1 billion buyback program, which amounted to more than 20% of the current market capitalization.

Revance Therapeutics fell back after a strong September

Revance is a US biotechnology company that has developed its own formulation of botulinum toxin for both aesthetic and therapeutic indications. In September, Daxxify (daxibotulinum toxin) was approved by the FDA for the treatment of glabellar lines (worry wrinkles). Revance has demonstrated that Daxxify, with its peptide-stabilized formulation, achieves a long-acting effect so that the treatment efficacy lasts an average of six months. Although there is no study that shows a statistically significant difference, this would mean a prolonged effect of about two months compared to established botulinum toxin products. The approval of Daxxify resulted in a strong share price reaction in September, which partly faded during October due to some profit taking.

OUTLOOK

The strong performance in October was a welcome bounce from a tepid third quarter and a rather weak year overall.

"The Presidential cycle effect"?

History shows a surprisingly marked and consistent pattern of weak starts in the midterm election year during a president's first election period. One explanation could be the rather tense relationship between a new president and a likewise new congress. Both determined to set the political agenda and thereby making it difficult for the president to be able to deliver on election promises. Promises which could have been good or detrimental to the profitability of public companies. Also, completely new budgets take time to be negotiated and implemented which probably lead to such periods being less fiscally expansionary. Importantly, history also tells us that the period after midterm elections during a president's first election term is usually very strong for the stock market all the way through to the next the presidential election.

Reasons to think it could be different this time

It would seem then that a promising time is ahead of us. However, unfortunately it could be different on this occasion. The reasons for this are the current strong inflationary environment and the tense, very ideologically competitive atmosphere between the Western democracies on one side and China, Russia and Iran on the other. Our current judgement is that the historical pattern of a period of strength will dominate over current issues. We believe inflation should peak soon and the war in Ukraine does not seem to be spilling over into other countries, at least not yet. The risk for a classic recession is not to be underestimated and the evolution of FED's interest rate policy to combat inflationary pressure is certainly not completely known, which makes predictions of relative subsector attractiveness and returns quite difficult.

A level of caution is still necessary

Nothing can be taken for granted and because of both macroeconomic related risks and geopolitical issues we are somewhat more cautious in terms of managing the fund than what we otherwise would be from a pure sector fundamentals point of view. Drug reform, decent final demand which is still recovering, and relatively modest margin pressure from cost inflation for most subsectors, all point to a reasonably good winter season, unless something goes completely wrong, most likely from an overambitious Federal Reserve or an expanding Ukraine war.
