Summary

- July was characterized by rotation and reversal with energy stocks being the clear winners. Healthcare as a sector appreciated slightly, driven by larger companies as small cap names detracted.
- The fund had a negative month, mainly driven by small cap holdings. The services sub-sector was the best performer.
- Healthcare companies have delivered solid Q2 earnings with potential to outperform broader markets heading into midterm elections.

Monthly comment

The stock market (MSCI World Index) continued to broaden out and appreciated by 0.7 percent in July. It was also characterized by frequently shifting market narratives, driving rotation from growth to value and a general reversal from winners to lagging sectors.

Energy stocks were the month's clear best performers, seeing a strong rebound from the previous month as alternative oil routes gained traction, primarily through Port of Yanbu on Saudi's Red Sea coast with potential to reduce the importance of the Hormuz Strait.

Tech was the worst performing sector of the month, mostly driven by a rotation out from semiconductors. Healthcare landed in the middle of the pack, slightly increasing during the month. Here, performance was largely driven by large cap companies which aligned well with the companies having announced Q2 financial results.

Strong earnings season so far

At the end of July, 307 of the S&P 500 companies (66 percent of market cap) had reported earnings. It had been a strong showing thus far, with 54 percent of companies' full-year earnings outlook surpassing consensus estimates and notably, non-tech companies lead the earnings beats.[1]

Similar encouraging results were seen for healthcare, where companies either reiterated or raised full-year guidance. Although market reactions were net positive, we observed profit taking in some popular names, reflecting higher market expectations given the strong June performance for healthcare.

In addition, price actions at reporting tended to move more with macro sentiment at the given day rather than fundamentals, making immediate interpretations somewhat difficult. Importantly, most healthcare small cap names are yet to release earnings, and their stock performances have taken a back seat in favour of large caps. This was most prominent for biotech stocks which fell back after an extended period of outperformance.

1 FactSet, data per end of July

Fed's direction remains unclear

In late July, the Federal Reserve kept rates unchanged as expected during the month's meeting, albeit three members calling for a quarter-point increase. Fed Chair Kevin Warsh's follow-up commentary left markets more uncertain as he vowed to steer inflation to 2 percent without providing clarity on the path towards it.

Coupled with the perceived lack of near-term solutions to the conflict in Iran, inflation concerns continued to drive long-term treasury yields higher. This also contributed to biotech's stark underperformance last days of July.

Fund performance

The fund had a negative month, decreasing by 2.7 percent in its main share class IC1 (EUR) and by 3.5 percent in RC1 (SEK). Services was the best performing sub-sector and contributed positively to performance. Small cap names in general, and biotech small caps in particular, were the worst performers of the month, driving July's negative performance. The main reasons were 1) rotation out from biotech after a strong period, 2) focus on large cap names early in the earnings reporting season and 3) heightened inflation concerns weighing on early-stage growth companies. In addition, a negative trial readout for AstraZeneca also impacted performance.

The fund's net exposure remained stable during the month. The fund increased its exposure to medtech and services and reduced its exposure to pharma and biotech sub-sectors. These changes took place in reaction to stock-specific events, such as earnings updates rather than broader sub-sector allocations. During the month, the best contributors were Tenet Healthcare and Regeneron Pharmaceuticals. The worst contributors were Alignment Healthcare and AstraZeneca.

Tenet Healthcare rose after earnings

Tenet Healthcare operates hospitals and ambulatory surgery centers in the US. During the month, the company reported results that far exceeded market expectations.

Several of Tenet's competitors posted weaker volumes in the quarter, primarily due to declining insurance coverage on the Health Insurance Exchanges (HIX). Tenet delivered a strong quarter driven by better HIX assumptions, solid volume growth and higher revenue per case, particularly in its ambulatory segment. The company continued to execute on its strategy to focus on higher acuity cases in its ambulatory segment which drives price per case. Lastly, the company demonstrated strong cost control thanks to a number of accelerated savings initiatives.

A come-back month for Regeneron Pharmaceuticals
The US biotech company posted a strong month after the pipeline setback earlier this year for myeloma drug candidate fianlimab. During the earnings call, focus lay instead on the strong performance from its base business with strong beats from both Dupixent and Eylea high-dose regimen. Management also provided constructive updates on the breadth of the pipeline and possible expansion of the Sanofi collaboration beyond current projects.

Alignment Healthcare fell on company guidance
Alignment Healthcare is a small health insurer focused on Medicare Advantage (MA). The stock fell despite the quarter beating consensus estimates. The decline was driven by the company's guidance, which indicated that the excess profits would mostly be reinvested in the business rather than flow through to the bottom line. The investments caught the market off guard and are explained by the company's expansion plans outside its home state of California. Finally, a modest prior period development reserve strengthening raised questions among investors, particularly against the backdrop of a lawsuit filed during the month by a former employee alleging manipulated earnings metrics.

AstraZeneca takes a hit after cardio trial disappoints
Pharma giant AstraZeneca suffered a blow as the CARDIO-TTRansform trial, partnered with Ionis Pharmaceuticals, posted negative results during the month. It investigated eplontersen, an RNA-targeted gene silencer, for use in cardiovascular disease transthyretin-mediated amyloid cardiomyopathy (ATTR-CM). The trial missed the combined goal of reducing cardiovascular mortality and recurrent clinical events. This was an important readout thought to expand eplontersen's market size which is now instead revised down in estimates. Importantly, it created caution among some investors heading into Astra's catalyst-rich second half of the year, with multiple important trial readouts in lung and breast cancer.

Reflections

Second quarter earnings tend to be quite speculative for healthcare names as investors try to gauge full-year trajectories for ongoing launches. For companies having reported earnings, we feel reassured of strong momentum in key products, aligning well with our own feedback from key external stakeholders (physicians, payors and patient organizations). Strong reports have however not immediately been met by increase in share prices but rather slightly delayed reactions, reflecting the larger rotations at play during July. The increased expectations after a strong June showing were logical. Although they may have contributed in some profit taking in healthcare, we saw strong fundamental support for a long-term growth outlook for most larger companies.

M&A appetite did not seem to lessen based on management commentary, indicating it can indeed be a record year for deal making. AstraZeneca's/Ionis' negative trial reminded many of the inherent risks even in late-stage programs but also highlights the need for continuous external bolstering of pipelines.

Most of the fund's holdings are yet to report heading into August, namely the small cap growth-oriented names dominated by biotech. It will be interesting to see how strong reports are met and if markets will again favour growth over value. A paucity in biotech performance was perhaps no big surprise. For instance, the biotech-focused ETF XBI had been up every month of the year heading into July which is unprecedented.

Where does healthcare go from here?
Although the historically large valuation gap in relation to broader market has largely closed (apart from medtech), the sector is by no means overbought. Despite the strong recent run, healthcare has still returned below average returns versus other sectors year-to-date. The improved earnings power seen from this year's earnings reports suggests there is room for relative outperformance in the second half of the year. On the political front, sporadic healthcare related headlines will catch market's attention, such as the recent proposal to impose 200 percent tariffs on generics. We see little-to-no political support or likelihood for this to materialize. Rather, companies indicate political clarity is steadily improving. The upcoming midterm elections should provide further momentum to healthcare stocks, if historical patterns are repeated.[2]

Our portfolio growth companies are poised to continue delivering and we like the set-up with ongoing launches and important data read-outs throughout 2026. Medtech has been the lagging sub-sector so far, but early signs point to a rebound from current 15-year low valuations. For the services sub-sector, we see attractive pockets of opportunity, for instance in life science tools and among health insurers. For these reasons we are inclined to maintain a relatively balanced exposure across our sub-sectors, each offering potential for idiosyncratic upside.

The war in Iran continues to be the biggest relevant macro factor given its potential impact on inflation. Fed chair Warsh's unclear stance on curbing inflation is best described as a wait-and-see approach pending more data input. Although the market is unlikely to welcome this uncertainty on future rates, we believe the fund is well positioned to manage both extreme outcomes – more defensive names should provide a cushion should rates come up steeply and inversely, lowered rates would boost our capital-intense growth companies.

Ultimately, we believe healthcare's long-term trajectory will continue upward, driven by greater earnings visibility across all sub-sectors.

Legal disclaimer

This is marketing communication. The AIF-funds ("the Funds") managed by Rhenman & Partners Asset Management AB ("Rhenman & Partners" or "Rhepa") are not investment funds as defined in the European Union directives relating to undertakings for collective investment in transferable securities ("UCITS").

Legal information regarding the Funds is contained in the Prospectuses and the KIDs/KIIDs. available at Rhenman & Partners webpage: www.rhepa.com. The prospectus and the KID/KIIDs can be obtained free of charge. The prospectus and KIIDs are available in English, the KIDs and the compliant handling information are available in English and Swedish.

Full details of the risks associated with an investment in the Funds are available in the Prospectuses and KIDs/KIIDs, which contain complete risk information and can be accessed at the Rhenman & Partners webpage: www.rhepa.com.

This material has been prepared by Rhenman & Partners for professional and non-professional investors. Rhenman & Partners when preparing this information has not taken into account any one customer's particular investment objectives, financial resources or other relevant circumstances and the opinions and recommendations herein are not intended to represent recommendations of particular investments to particular customers. This material is for informational purposes only and should not be construed as an offer or solicitation to sell or buy units in the Funds. Investors are strongly recommended to get professional advice as to whether investment in either of the Funds is appropriate having regard to their particular investment needs, objectives and financial circumstances before investing.

Past performance does not predict future returns. Future performance is subject to taxation, which depends on investors' situation and may change in the future. Any scenario presented, as applicable, is an estimate of future performance based on evidence from the past on how the value of this investment varies, and/or current market conditions and is not an exact indicator; what investors will get will vary depending on how the market performs and how long they keep the investment. For a complete overview of the costs connected to an investment in the Fund, please refer to the relevant costs and expenses sections of the offering memorandum. Please refer to the prospectus and to the KID/KIID before making any final investment decisions. The costs connected to investments in the Fund may increase or decrease as a result of currency and exchange rate fluctuations. Investors should be aware that any use of leverage, as applicable, may result in increased returns but also in potential increased losses. The decision to invest in the Fund should take into account all of its characteristics and objectives as described in the prospectus and other fund documentation. For additional information on the sustainability related aspects, please refer to the relevant ESG/SFDR disclosures in the offering memorandum and on www.rhepa.com. Investors can connect with Rhenman & Partners at www.rhepa.com to obtain a summary, in English, of their rights. ONE Fund Management S.A., as alternative investment fund manager of the Fund, can terminate the arrangements made for the marketing of the Fund.

All securities' transactions involve risks, which include (among others) the risk of adverse or unanticipated market, financial or political developments and, in international transactions, currency risk. There can be no assurance that an investment in the Funds will achieve profits or avoid incurring substantial losses. There is a high degree of risk inherent in investments and they may not be suitable for all eligible investors. It is possible that an investor may lose some or all of its investment. The past is not necessarily a guide to the future performance of an investment. The value of investments may fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount invested. Changes in rates of foreign exchange may cause the value of investments to go up or down.

Before making an investment decision, an investor and/or its adviser should (i) consider the suitability of investments in either of the Funds with respect to its investment objectives and personal situation and (ii) consider factors such as its personal net worth, income, age, risk tolerance and liquidity needs. The Funds are illiquid, and redemptions are limited to specified windows. Investors should be prepared to hold for the long term. Short-term investors and investors who cannot bear the loss of some or all of their investment or the risks associated with the limited liquidity of an investment should not invest.

The Fund is actively managed and is not managed in reference to any benchmark index for portfolio construction

Due care and attention has been used in the preparation of this information. However, actual results may vary from their forecasts, and any variation may be materially positive or negative. Forecasts, by their very nature, are subject to uncertainty and contingencies, many of which are outside the control of Rhenman & Partners. Rhenman & Partners cannot guarantee that the information contained herein is without fault or entirely accurate. There may be delays, omissions or inaccuracies in the information. Any dated information is published as of its date only and no obligation or responsibility is undertaken to update or amend any such information.

The information in this material is based on sources that Rhenman & Partners believes to be reliable. Rhenman & Partners can however not guarantee that all information is correct. Furthermore, information and opinions may change without notice. Rhenman & Partners is under no obligation to make amendments or changes to this publication if errors are found or opinions or information change.
