Monthly report: October 2026

RHENMAN HEALTHCARE EQUITY L/S

This is marketing communication. For professional investors only. Past performance is no guarantee of future returns.

- AI jitters and a rotation into defensives benefited the healthcare sector; large-cap pharma performed particularly well.
- The fund delivered a positive return, driven mainly by pharmaceuticals and healthcare services.
- M&A activity in the sector slowed somewhat; biotech funding remained healthy.
- The earnings season has so far exceeded expectations for the fund's holdings – most small and mid-cap companies are yet to report.

It's harder to make monkeys than memory

The healthcare sector benefited from a rotation out of tech and into defensive sectors during October. A lukewarm reception of reports from the larger tech companies, together with concerns about the financing of the AI buildout, was the primary cause.

Large-cap pharma (DRG Index) had its best month since April 2020 and now trades in line with the S&P 500 on a P/E basis, despite starting the year at a 27 percent discount. Since 2000, the DRG has on average traded at a 1 percent premium. In the last week of the month alone, the DRG gained 7 percentage points on large-cap tech, illustrating the strength of the rotation.

Hardly anyone following the stock market has missed that memory stocks have been the trade of the year, as the AI buildout has created an acute shortage of DRAM and NAND memory. During the month, research firm Citrini published a report with a parallel thesis for drug development, best summed up in the punchy quote "It's harder to make monkeys than memory". Their thesis is that AI will lead to more drug studies and thus to increased demand for monkeys for animal testing. Among others, Charles River, the world's largest supplier of animal models, was highlighted as a result.

The healthcare sector in October

The pharmaceutical sector performed strongly, mainly thanks to defensive rotation and solid quarterly reports. Europe's largest cancer conference, ESMO, took place, with positive data releases from AstraZeneca, Roche and Genmab, among others.

Strong reports from both health insurers and life science tools companies lifted the healthcare services sub-sector. Hospitals, on the other hand, reported a relatively weak payer mix with a higher share of uninsured patients due to the expiration of the enhanced subsidies (eAPTC).

Medtech performed relatively well. Reports from the large companies can so far be summed up as better than feared. The sub-sector trades near record-low valuations after tariffs, weak consumer confidence, a lack of product cycles and reduced insurance coverage have weighed on medtech this year. Stable utilisation levels and constructive outlooks were enough to give the sub-sector a boost in October. Medtronic in particular led the advance, thanks to an FDA approval and strong clinical data in its cardiac ablation business.

Biotech declined as a lack of M&A activity and reduced risk appetite weighed on the sub-sector. Investor appetite for financing biotech companies nonetheless remained healthy, with several successful IPOs and even stronger interest in the private markets. In the first nine months of the year, biotech companies raised more than USD 90 billion in total financing, almost double the amount raised in the same period last year[1].

Fund performance

In October, the fund rose by 6.8 percent in the main share class IC1 (EUR) and by 3.4 percent in RC1 (SEK). The gain was driven mainly by pharmaceuticals and healthcare services. Medtech also contributed to the fund's performance, while biotech detracted. Exposure to healthcare services was reduced slightly in favour of medtech and pharmaceuticals.

The largest contributors during the month were Genmab and Eli Lilly. Genmab rose after petosemtamab, acquired through the purchase of Merus, showed a halving of the mortality risk in a phase III study in head and neck cancer, while the company also reported a phase III success in ovarian cancer (Rina-S). Eli Lilly rose after raising its full-year guidance, driven by the obesity and diabetes drugs Mounjaro and Zepbound.

The largest negative contributions came from Iovance and Axsome. Iovance fell after new study data for the company's cell therapy in lung cancer failed to convince the market. The treatment worked very well for a smaller group of patients but somewhat less well for the broader population. Axsome's share price declined due to weak prescription data for Auvelity, a drug for depression and for agitation associated with Alzheimer's disease.

Reflections

The US midterm elections, held on November 3, handed the Democrats control over the House of Representatives and the Senate. Their ability to force a reversal of the cuts to publicly funded health insurance programmes now increase. The House Minority Leader has singled out these healthcare issues as priorities in the upcoming debt ceiling negotiations, which bodes well for the sector. Although one must remember that the President still has veto power.

The reporting season has so far gone well, and we are encouraged by strong sales growth for key products, good innovation and solid clinical data results across many of our portfolio companies. Excluding loss-making companies from a broad healthcare index, the earnings outlook for 2027 looks unusually strong – with annual earnings growth of 29 percent[2]. That is exactly the same earnings outlook for next year as the tech-heavy Nasdaq 100 index has at the time of writing.

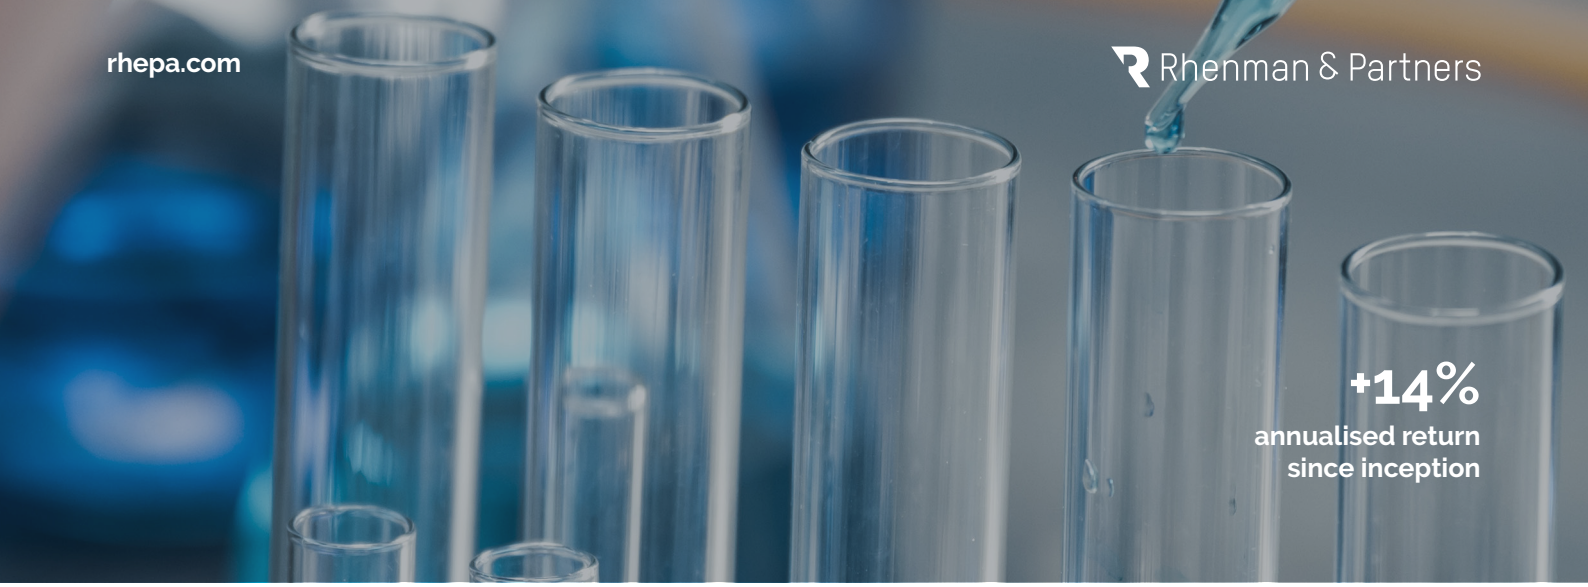

So far, it has been the larger healthcare companies that have driven the market's advance, and we hope to see this broaden out to small and mid-cap companies, whose quarterly reports are due in November.

At the same time, we should bear in mind that geopolitical developments could deteriorate if Trump feels he has nothing to lose. This could have implications for the inflation and interest rate outlook, and it is the small-caps in the sector that are the most sensitive to interest rates.

This material has been prepared by Rhenman & Partners for professional and non-professional investors. Rhenman & Partners when preparing this information has not taken into account any one customer's particular investment objectives, financial resources or other relevant circumstances and the opinions and recommendations herein are not intended to represent recommendations of particular investments to particular customers. This material is for informational purposes only and should not be construed as an offer or solicitation to sell or buy units in the Funds. Investors are strongly recommended to get professional advice as to whether investment in either of the Funds is appropriate having regard to their particular investment needs, objectives and financial circumstances before investing.

Past performance does not predict future returns. Future performance is subject to taxation, which depends on investors' situation and may change in the future. Any scenario presented, as applicable, is an estimate of future performance based on evidence from the past on how the value of this investment varies, and/or current market conditions and is not an exact indicator; what investors will get will vary depending on how the market performs and how long they keep the investment. For a complete overview of the costs connected to an investment in the Fund, please refer to the relevant costs and expenses sections of the offering memorandum. Please refer to the prospectus and to the KID/KIID before making any final investment decisions. The costs connected to investments in the Fund may increase or decrease as a result of currency and exchange rate fluctuations. Investors should be aware that any use of leverage, as applicable, may result in increased returns but also in potential increased losses. The decision to invest in the Fund should take into account all of its characteristics and objectives as described in the prospectus and other fund documentation. For additional information on the sustainability related aspects, please refer to the relevant ESG/SFDR disclosures in the offering memorandum and on www.rhepa.com. All securities' transactions involve risks, which include (among others) the risk of adverse or unanticipated market, financial or political developments and, in international transactions, currency risk. There can be no assurance that an investment in the Funds will achieve profits or avoid incurring substantial losses. There is a high degree of risk inherent in investments and they may not be suitable for all eligible investors. It is possible that an investor may lose some or all of its investment. The past is not necessarily a guide to the future performance of an investment. The value of investments may fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount invested. Changes in rates of foreign exchange may cause the value of investments to go up or down.

Before making an investment decision, an investor and/or its adviser should (i) consider the suitability of investments in either of the Funds with respect to its investment objectives and personal situation and (ii) consider factors such as its personal net worth, income, age, risk tolerance and liquidity needs. The Funds are illiquid, and redemptions are limited to specified windows. Investors should be prepared to hold for the long term. Short-term investors and investors who cannot bear the loss of some or all of their investment or the risks associated with the limited liquidity of an investment should not invest.

The Fund is actively managed and is not managed in reference to any benchmark index for portfolio construction
